Door Intercom

Intercom Systems and Access Control

Access control systems are commonly linked with intercom systems, enabling communication between a visitor and host. Modern systems now include integrated cameras, enabling the host to conduct a thorough security check visually and audibly before granting entry.

Next Level Access Control

A door intercom system not only allows for remote door access monitoring but also opens a world of possibilities for communication, security, and smart building operations. It goes beyond door access, and audio and video calls; it represents the future of smart building access control technology and security.

The challenges with current systems

XS4 Com door intercom platform introduces flexibility and remote Access management, resolving these issues effectively.

1/4

Physical Presence

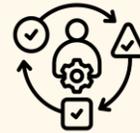

Traditional systems require users to be physically present at the intercom, disrupting productivity and convenience.

2/4

Complex Installation

Many intercom systems require complex, disruptive installations, making new setups and upgrades difficult.

3/4

Access Control

Integrating current door intercom systems with access control presents limitations and challenges.

4/4

Security

Conventional intercoms lack advanced security features like geofencing and video verification, reducing their ability to ensure secure access.
